Undertake Initial Rescue PMAOMIR301

Course Outline

Personnel undertaking a task in a workplace may witness an incident involving a co-worker. In these few initial critical minutes before other help arrives, the actions of the person may have a significant effect on the well-being of their co-worker. However, at no time should the person take any action that is likely to cause them to be placed at risk.

This course is designed to teach participants how to effect an initial rescue arising from an incident and provides participants with an understanding of legislative and administrative requirements, entry and rescue equipment and atmospheric monitoring requirements.

Course Subjects

- Respond to the incident surroundings.
- Determine the condition of the person
- Determine the appropriate rescue method
- Use specialized rescue equipment
- Convey information to other persons
- Effect rescue if within your capabilities
- Complete incident reports
- Recommend improvements to the rescue process
